Arts Highlights with the City of Frederick

Mayor Michael O'Connor's State of the City address at the Mountain City Elks Lodge #382 Tuesday included an acknowledgement of FAC's 50th Anniversary and a highlight reel featuring Frederick's arts renaissance with footage of FAC's Black-eyed Susan public art installation by artist Lusmerlin. It is a big year for the arts with Weinberg Art Center celebrating their 100th anniversary as well.

Yesterday, the City Council passed a grant for two public art projects with FAC on the west side of the city, including local art-wrapped utility boxes and a new large-scale sculpture.

Frederick City Hall to Create Time Capsule

Saturday, September 12th at 12:30 pm

As part of the City of Frederick's celebration of America's 250th anniversary, residents are invited to help fill a time capsule with their hopes and dreams for Frederick's future, to be sealed and opened again in 50 years.

The time capsule will be buried during "In the Streets," on September 12 at 12:30 PM in front of City Hall. Among the items included will be postcards and reflections drawn from Frederick's Shared Future, a public art exhibition presented by the City's Art in City Hall Program featuring USA 250 postcards and video responses created by city residents.

An FAC 50th Anniversary Black-eyed Susan flower sculpture, symbolizing justice, resilience and regeneration will be included in the City's time capsule.

James Gardner

CONTEMPORARY INNOVATIONS

OF VERSES, VINES, AND VENERATORS

Mixed media work by James Gardner

September 5–November 1, 2026

Looking to the iconography of martyrdoms and the depictions of saints, Gardner's recent work traces the historical iterations and mutations of these images while attempting to link their symbolism with myth and personal resonances. Through the activity of painting, common or even mundane images continually evolve to help in processes that reclaim the "symbolic imaginal" and animate new forms of knowledge and experience.

Exhibition Opening: Saturday, Sep 5
