New Exhibition by Artist Lisa Dillin Opens at 5 E. 2nd Street Art Center

A new show featuring the work of artist Lisa Dillin, entitled "Sorry We Missed You," will be opening Saturday, May 12th at FAC's 5 E. 2nd Street Art Center.

Artist Statement:

Since March of 2020 the physical and emotional space between each of us has widened like a deep chasm along an active fault line. Our isolation is a necessity in order to protect one another – but, this shared experience has left a lasting impression on us. Sorry we missed you makes tangible the emotional quality of the sustained isolation that characterizes this time.

About the Artist:

Lisa Dillin is an interdisciplinary Baltimore-based artist working primarily in sculpture and participatory art practices. Dillin earned her BFA in photography from Atlanta College of Art in 1998 and her MFA in sculpture from Cranbrook Academy of Art in 2006. Her work has been selected for exhibition at various venues including the Baltimore Museum of Art and The Contemporary Museum in Baltimore, MD, Hamiltonian Gallery and Washington Project for the Arts, in Washington, D.C., Vox Populi and Practice Gallery in Philadelphia, PA, as well as Nurture Art and Transmitter in Brooklyn, NY. Art fairs include the Select Art Fair in NYC, Aqua Art Fair and Artist-Run Art Fair in Miami, FL. Honors include 2014 and 2017 MSAC Individual Artist awards in sculpture, second place prize winner of the Trawick Awards in 2014, and selection as a Sondheim Prize Finalist in 2012.

New Projects in FAC's Barn Art Initiative

FAC launches its barn art initiative this summer. Artists were asked to submit designs inspired by nature or natural materials.

Ribbon Cutting Celebrates Artist Lusmerlin's "Black Girl Magic" Mural

FAC recently attended the installation of artist and FAC Board Member Lusmerlin's "Black Girl Magic" mural at the William R. Diggs Memorial Pool. The mural is part of an ongoing initiative to create Black art for installation throughout Frederick.

FAC provided a grant which partially funded the mural and it was originally displayed for several months at Sky Stage.

FAC Board Member & artist Lusmerlin cuts the ribbon on her "Black Girl Magic" mural. Also present is FAC Secretary Paula Rubin-Wexler.

TAG Opens Its New N. Market Gallery Space

The Artists Gallery, one of Frederick's longest-running galleries having been established in 1990, cut the ribbon Friday on its new space at 501 N. Market Street.

FAC's Director of Operations Gabriella Smith attended and presented a certificate on behalf of County Executive Jan Gardner. Congratulations TAG!

Middletown High School Art Teacher Wins Hood College Teachers' Award

Middletown High School art teacher Donna Lehman has been named the recipient of the 2021 Charles E. Tressler Distinguished Teacher Award.

The award is given annually by Hood College to a FCPS teacher who has made a significant impact on students.

Lehman, who has been an art teacher at Middletown High since 1998, was nominated by Middletown High Principal Bernard Quesada.

“Donna’s work ethic and her uncompromising moral and high standards are both rare and refreshing,” Quesada said. “My admiration and respect for her both personally and professionally is unequalled.”

Lehman is the adviser to Middletown High’s photography club in addition to the school’s National Honor Society chapter, which she founded in 2003.

Frederick Arts Council Member Spotlight

Frederick Book Arts Center

Interview with Johnny Carrera, Executive Director

The FBAC teaches the craft and techniques associated with the Arts of the Book: Letterpress printing, printmaking, book binding, and photography. Currently offering zoom classes, FBAC is looking forward to again providing in person workshops, field trips, school visits, and classes and exhibitions this summer. FBAC works to create opportunities for everyone to learn, intern, enjoy and display work at our Center.

Favorite Artist:

How does one choose a "favorite artist?" Julie Chen is a contemporary book artist we greatly admire. Julie creates highly crafted artists' books that incorporate play and creativity. She uses letterpress and traditional bookbinding techniques to create tactile sequential experiences that define what makes an artist's book different from any other art form on the planet. Her website is: <https://flyingfishpress.com/> But we also love Karen Hanmer, a brilliant bookbinder and educator who will be teaching leather paring techniques in a zoom class for FBAC, and Shawn Sheehy who is the creator of Beyond the Sixth Extinction: A Post-Apocalyptic Pop-Up who will be teaching a four part class in pop-ups starting in May! And the list goes on and on- subscribe to our mailing list to learn about more great artists working with the book arts.

Fun Fact:

The FBAC has made their 1882 Bailey Copy Press available for ceremonial adoption this year. Barbara Rhodes, Hood Graduate and the world's preeminent scholar on copy presses will help us bring Bailey back to life, performing the task of copying a letter with a technique that revolutionized the business world almost 150 years ago and then was almost completely forgotten for a century. Curious? Find out how to Adopt Bailey and get the whole story on our website.

Author: Will Englund

Genre: Investigative Reporting

"Sometimes, I guess, you just go where your nose leads you." – Will Englund

William A. Englund (born March 30, 1953) is a Pulitzer prize-winning, American journalist, and author. He graduated from Harvard College with an A.B. in English and a M.S. from the Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism. Says Englund, "I studied English literature as a Harvard undergraduate, because I figured novels would be more interesting than textbooks, yet it was the master's program at Columbia University's journalism school that actually taught me something about writing."

Englund spent over 4 decades in the news business. His first experience in journalism was with the The Record, in Bergen County, New Jersey. Then, in 1977, he joined the Baltimore Sun and remained there till 2008 when he became a White House correspondent for the National Journal. Two years later he joined the Washington Post.

While at The Baltimore Sun, Englund was an editorial writer and an associate editor. His taste for foreign foreign assignments came in 1988 when he and his wife, Kathy Lally, worked for the Glasgow Herald as part of a Fulbright scholarship to the United Kingdom.

Englund's first gained notoriety in 1998 with the award of a Pulitzer Prize for investigative reporting for his series, with Gary Cohn, on the Shipbreaking Industry. Shipbreaking is when ships are scrapped (broken apart) for their steel. The series focused on the health and safety hazards that salvage workers faced due to lack of training. That same year he received the George Polk award and an Overseas Press Club prize for the same work.

Total, Englund spent twelve years assigned to Russia as a foreign correspondent. It was during one assignment that Englund saw a plaque on the wall of a church in St. Petersburg commemorating parishioners who had died during the First World War. He was struck by the fact that thought 1.7 million Russian Soldiers were killed in the WWI, yet this was the only public memorial he could remember seeing in Russia. Their memory had been obliterated. Englund credits that plaque as the catalyst for writing, March 1917: On the Brink of War and Revolution.

In December 2019, Englund was named as The Washington Post's new energy reporter for Business. Englund still is married to Kathy Laly, their two daughters are grown and flown, and he still lives in Baltimore and commutes every day to the Washington Post to work the foreign desk.

Sample Reading List: "Shipbreakers" a series of stories on the shipbreaking industry, "March 1917: On the Brink of War and Revolution"
