FAC Shows Support for the Hill Street Skatepark

FAC's Art Center Coordinator, SJ Wiegand, represented the Frederick Arts Council earlier this month at the public hearing for the Hill Street Skatepark renovation. FAC anticipates that the renovated skatepark would present a unique opportunity to place additional art in Frederick and help advance the arts in the city.

See below for concept images for the renovation.

FAC Tours Potential Artists Studio Space

FAC recently led a group of local artists on a tour of a potential artists studio space in the heart of downtown Frederick. The previous BB&T building, at 1 N. Market Street, is up for consideration to house 33 artists in private studio spaces, and could be coming online as soon as mid-December or early 2023. Amenities include an elevator in the building, a utility sink on each floor, communal gathering spaces, and beautiful downtown views from several of the studios. The former bank space would house a street-level gallery for resident artists.

Stay tuned for more info on this exciting opportunity!

Equal parts frontman, poet, and conductor, Joe Keyes leads his nine-piece Late Bloomer Band through a fresh concoction of funk, R&B, soul, rock, and jazz while drawing on the musical auras of Miles Davis, Gil Scott-Heron, Sun Ra, and early Parliament-Funkadelic. Keyes captivates audiences with his deep, commanding vocals, punctuated by tales of love, family, and addiction from his six decades on earth. The band's vibe and sound – honed over years of theatrical, improvisational shows – journeys from gentle grooves to tight funk and epic crescendos.

Come out and listen to some improv jazz every first and third Wednesday of the month at the FAC Art Center in Downtown Frederick from 7 pm- 9 pm.

NOTABLE AUTHOR: Eileen McIntire

“Writing is the perfect career for the lifelong learner because you’d better be.” – Eileen McIntire

Eileen Haavik McIntire, author of the 90s Club mystery series, knows one thing for sure. The Nancy Drew she loved reading about as a child would still be piling up clues like tricks in a bridge game at age 90. Nancy Drew inspired the 90s Club series where Nancy Dickenson and her 90s Club cronies at Whisperwood Retirement Village are still on the job, solving mysteries and saving lives—even their own.

“I met a slim, attractive woman at a pool party who’d been swimming laps,” says Eileen, “and later learned she was 90 years old! That opened my eyes, and I began collecting articles about people in their 90s—and 100s—who are running marathons, winning tennis tournaments and canoe races and publishing their books. The 90’s Club series is helping erase the myths and stereotypes that set elderly people apart from the rest of the population.” Eileen also writes historical and suspense novels and has traveled for research. She has ridden a camel in the Moroccan Sahara, fished for piranhas in the Amazon, sailed in a felucca on the Nile, stayed overnight in a mountain hut in Ethiopia, and spent three years on a motorsailer.

She is a past president of the Maryland Writers’ Association (MWA) and an enthusiastic member of Sisters in Crime. She and her husband, Dr. Roger McIntire, own Summit Crossroads Press, which publishes his books for parents, and the fiction imprint, Amanita Books. They live in Columbia, MD, with their little dog José. Learn more at: <https://www.secretpanels.net>.

A synonym is usually defined as a word having the same meaning as another word in certain contexts. Two people can also be synonymous with each other; this is especially easy when two artists share aesthetic sensibilities and philosophies. Judith Kornett and Julia Schrecengost do indeed share these attributes as artists and friends. Kornett and Schrecengost have worked side by side in the studio for much of the past year swapping ideas, techniques, inspirations, and stories. This exhibition is the culmination of both artists' labor from this period, during which they realized they could only describe this work as a meeting of their artistic minds, an obvious synonymous connection.

Their show, entitled SYNONYMS, will include drawings, prints, and sculptures. It will be on display at NOMA Gallery, 437 N. Market St., Frederick Maryland, from December 2nd-31st. The artists' reception will be Saturday, December 3rd from 5-8 pm. There will be an artists' talk on Thursday, December 15, from 7-8 pm.

Gaslight Gallery

Gillian Grozier is a painter and writer who hails from England. She came to America as a young adult and trained at the Students League in New York City. She later worked with Anthony Toney, and she was a member of the Westchester Art Society and the Mamaroneck Arts Guild. Exhibiting works in oils, acrylics, and mixed media, she won the Audubon Artists Michael M. Engels, Sr. Award, and taught painting in Chappaqua, NY. She draws from a considerable lifetime of visual and literary experience. Gillian has been a regular exhibitor in New York and Connecticut galleries and museums. She moved to Frederick, MD in 2016, responding to the vibrancy of the art community here. Kristie's World provides a glimpse of our familiar town from the gaze of an empathetic outsider.
